Anniversary & Retirement Gift Guide

Reward your devoted employees for their years of dedicated service. We know how to make your employees feel special and honored. Here are some of our favorite ideas to show your gratitude.

Personalized Wine and Champagne

By far the most personal way to say thanks. You can choose from a variety of wine labels on our website to customize the look and feel of your gift. You can include your company logo, your employee's name, years in service or a personalized message for that extra special touch.

Your trusted employee can enjoy the wine immediately and keep the bottle to remember for years to come. Or they can save it for an especially trying day of working with you breathing down their neck all day. From classy to casual to downright hilarious it's all up to you.

Personalized Beer

This is the same concept as the personalized wine, but gives you a little more of a casual approach. You know those embarrassing blackmail photos of last years Christmas party that you have been saving up? We have an excuse for you to finally use them. Now, you don't have to use embarrassing photos, and if you aren't on that casual of terms with your employees, it would not be appropriate. But if your work environment is like mine, it would be the only way to personalize the beer.

Just last week we had a secretary buy some beer for her boss's anniversary with the goofiest photo from his childhood. With coke bottle glasses, freckles, missing teeth and a cow-lick, she must have bribed someone for that!

Custom Gift Baskets

What better way to celebrate than with one of our luxurious wine gift baskets. Make your gift the one they can't forget. Include a bottle of personalized wine or champagne.

Retirement Party Etiquette

Bring a Gift

Courteous guests who arrive at a retirement party are mindful of the need to bring along a gift and a card. The type of gift you buy will depend on how close you are to the retiree. But it is always good manners to bring along a small gift and a card congratulating the retiree on their new status. Often in office parties the group will all pitch in on one special gift.

Be Happy for the Retiree

A retirement party is meant to be a joyous occasion for the retiree and close family and friends, as the retiree slows down the pace of life and starts making plans for the future. Do not use this as an opportunity to air your grievances about your job and how you wish that you were retiring. It is inappropriate and shows disrespect for the retiree. Your time will come. In the meantime, share in the retiree's joy.

Retirement Sayings & Wishes

When it is your turn to say something special about the honoree at a retirement party, your retirement wishes may be funny, heartfelt or both.

Retirements are about endings and beginnings and whatever you say about a retiree should be heartfelt and descriptive of the retiree's contributions. Below are some quotes to help you plan your retirement roast or a toast.
